

'Harry Potter: Hogwarts Mystery' hits your phone April 25th

Notes & Cues:	Article: Harry Potter: Hogwarts Mystery, the much-anticipated mobile adventure game that will allow players to become a student at the wizarding school, will be launched on 25 April, developer Jam City has announced. The game, which was revealed on the Pottermore site last autumn, will also feature six actors reprising their roles from the Harry Potter movies, including Michael Gambon as Professor Dumbledore and Dame Maggie Smith as Professor McGonagall. Described as a story-driven mobile narrative role-playing game, Hogwarts Mystery will see players creating their own student characters, attending classes, learning spells and taking part in Duelling Club. It will be possible to build friendships – and rivalries – as the story evolves, with key decisions affecting the character arc, while a new encounter system will provide pivotal moments that will shape each quest. It will face competition from Harry Potter: Wizards Unite, another mobile game from Pokémon Go developer Niantic, also scheduled for release this year through Portkey Games. Like Pokémon Go, Wizards Unite will use augmented reality technology to superimpose the Harry Potter universe onto the real world, placing magical artefacts and creatures around players' neighbourhoods.
Summary:	